Robert Galbraith Heath

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Robert_Galbraith_Heath

Robert Galbraith Heath was an American psychiatrist who followed the theory of biological psychiatry. He believed that mental illness was solely caused by organic defects and could be treated through physical means. He conducted many experiments involving electrical stimulation of the brain using surgically implanted electrodes. He claimed to have converted a homosexual man to heterosexuality through deep brain stimulation. Heath also experimented with psychosurgery, the drug bulbocapnine, and LSD, using African-American prisoners as subjects. His work is considered highly controversial today and is rarely used as reference material.
